DEDIC

To

Miss Florence Bernd

who because of her sincere and unselfish interest in every student and her active leadership in the civic and scholastic growth of our school, is endeared to every Lanierian, we the Seniors of 1940 dedicate this, our annual.

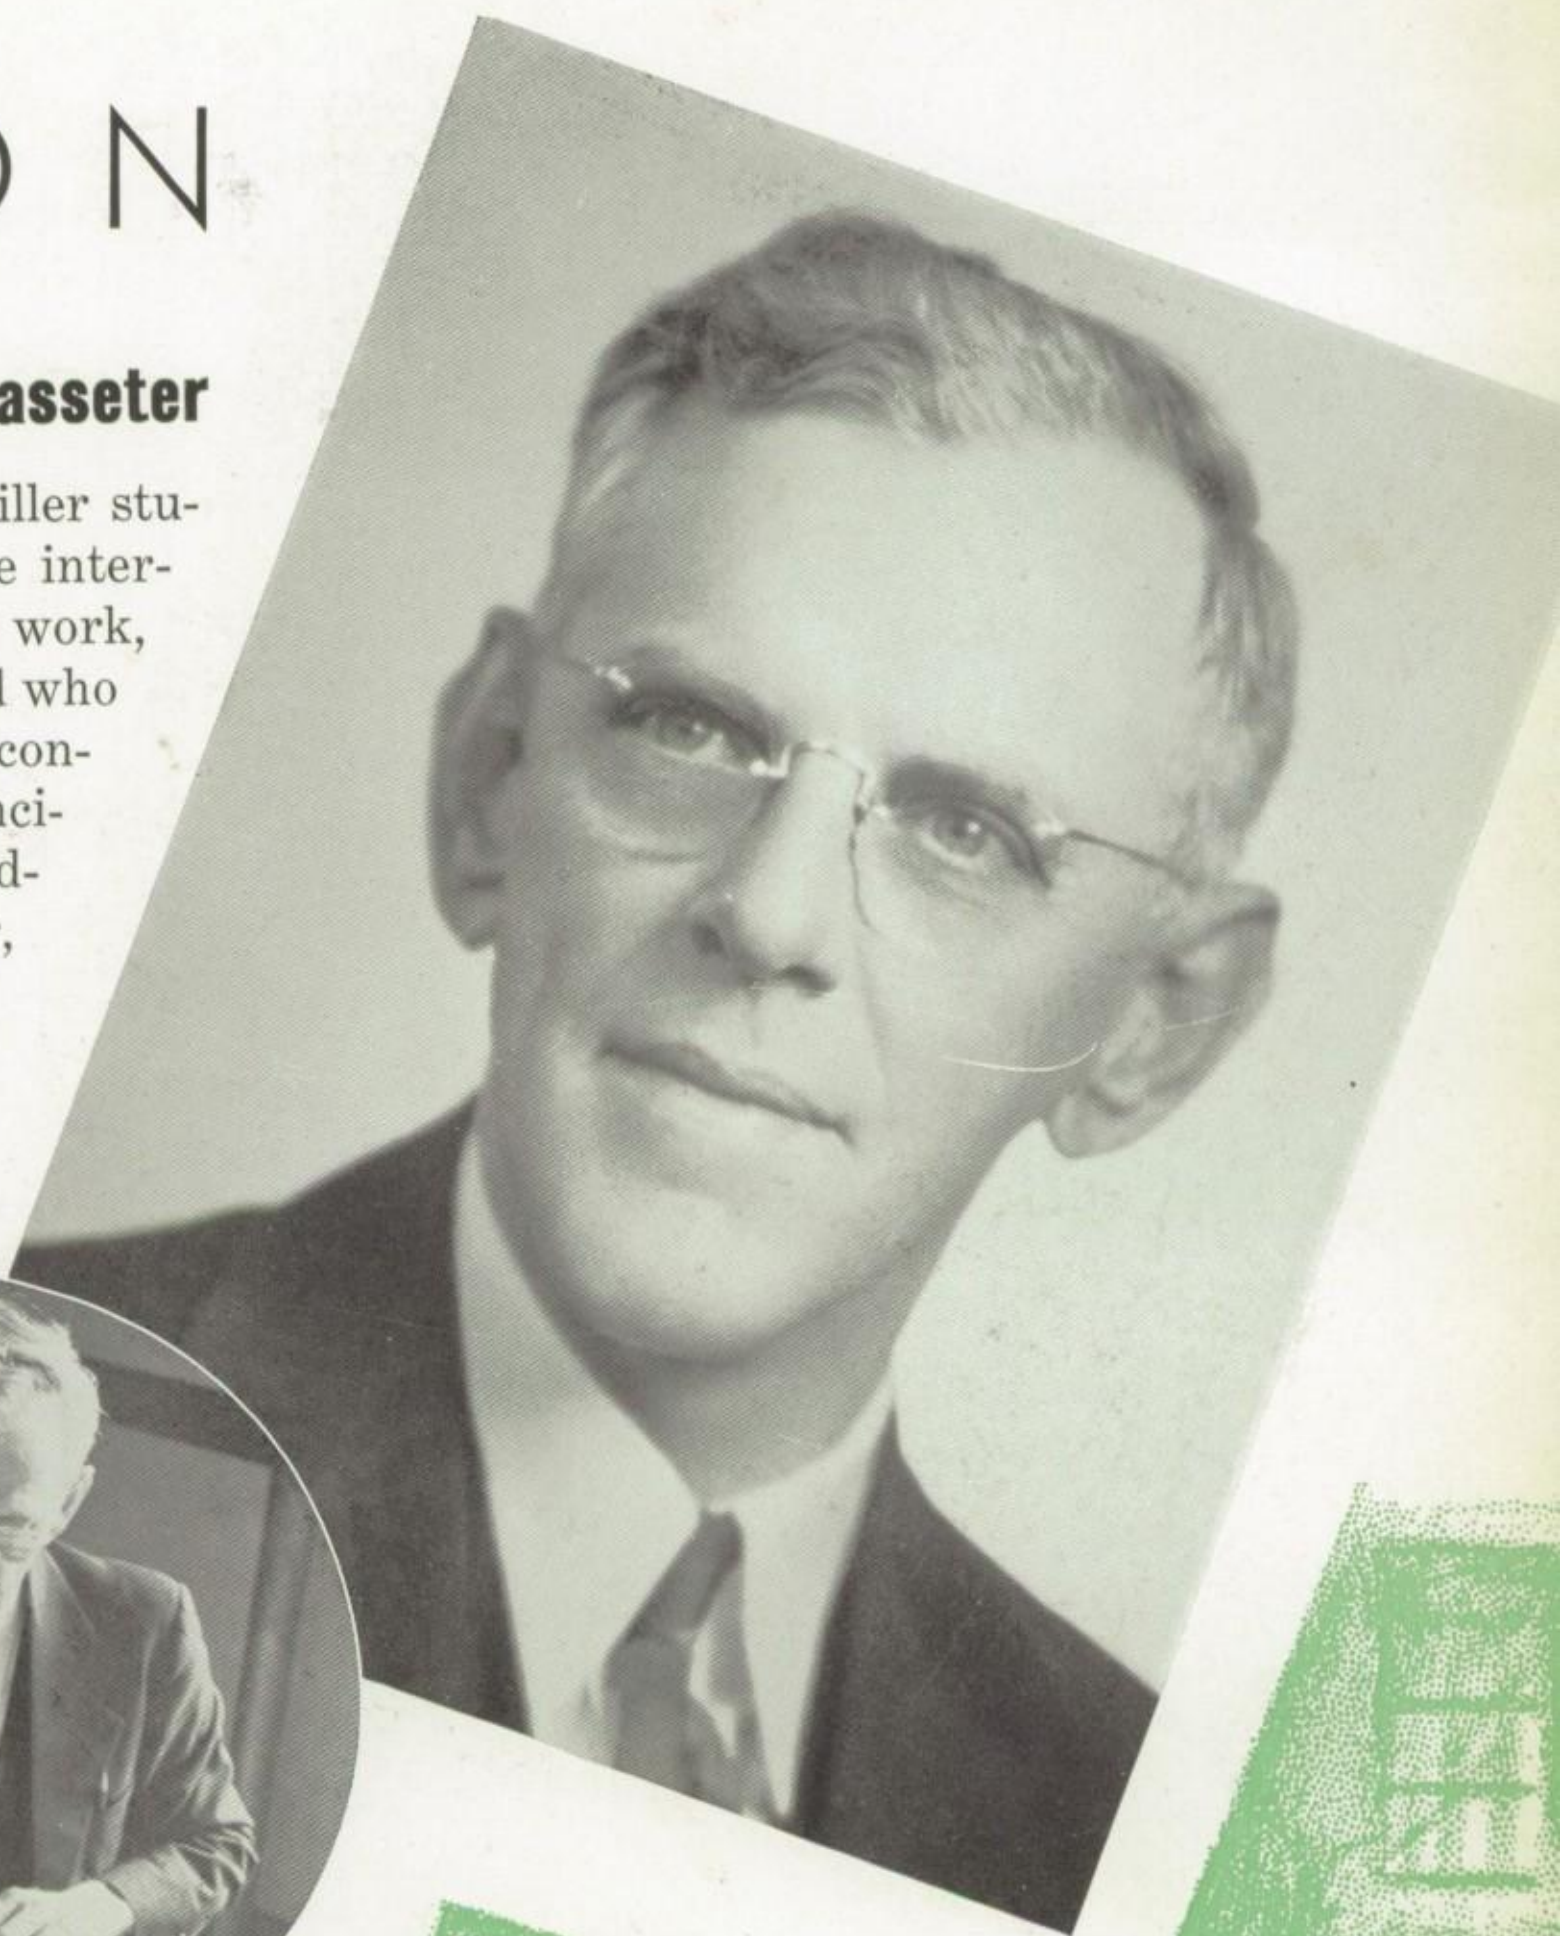

A T I O N

To

Mr. Horace S. Lasseter

who is dear to all Miller students for his genuine interest in each girl, her work, and her progress, and who is invaluable for his constant efforts as a principal toward the advancement of Miller, we the Seniors of 1940 dedicate this, our annual.

Middle row: Bum! Bum! Bum! Here we come! Surprised, Patsy? Wouldn't it be grand if we had co-education.

Bottom row: Dark eyes. Ann and her man. What has he got that I haven't.

When We Were Wee

As the current song title goes, You'd Be Surprised. Things have happened to Miller Seniors that you never dreamed possible. Far back, out of the dim, remote recesses of their past, occurrences have come to light, that will shatter to bits their shell of dignified aloofness. For, O unhappy thought, it has been discovered these very seniors, upon whom we have gazed with awe and admiration, were, in their youth, mean adventure-some rascals. Justice will find a way; so, with a fresh Kleenex to wipe away the tears of disillusionment, these horrible deeds will be disclosed.

Each afternoon, when Elizabeth Rycroft was at the ripe age of two, she went walking in the park in the company of her mother. Little Lizzie seemed only a sweet, innocent child but she fooled 'em. When her mother stopped to chat and show off her "ray of sunshine" Lizzie'd gnash her teeth, slip behind the doting friend, for a huge bite.

Helen Farmer used to sleep every night with a rag of an old bathing suit. It was impossible to send her off to the Land of Nod until she had enfolded her "mank" in a loving embrace.

Martha Weaver fascinated McKibben Lane in grammar school, but he told his daddy he wouldn't claim her for his sweetheart - - - "She wore her dresses too short."

One night Mary Walker's family had a big dinner. As a special favor, Mary was allowed to wedge herself in at the foot of the table by mama. Getting angry at being served her usual dish of gruel, instead of steak, Mary picked up the dish and hurled it at her father. It hit the guest-of-honor instead.

We've tried lots of ways to please Teacher, but Emily Andrews had us all beat 'way back yonder. She won favor by dumping an armful of buttercups in the lap of each year's teacher.

Nancy Highsmith used to have a yen toward Negro babies. She became furious upon learning that the new boy arrival in her family was white. When the nurse wasn't looking one day, she calmly swapped him for the cook's youngest.

Nina Friedman used to love balloons. Mama and Daddy decorated her room with brightly colored ones, so she'd be pleased when she woke up.

People like queer things these days. But Margie Weem's appetite beats 'em all. She used to steal the kitchen soap for an early morning snack.

Here we've all been thinking how lucky Tommie Nell Davis is, to be able to keep one boy on her string for five years. But no wonder. She started her practice way ahead of the rest of us. At the age of three Tommie Nell amused herself in Sunday School by kissing all the little boys.

Dot Ross Smith, being a horribly jealous child, bitterly resented the arrival of her little sister, Berma. When things became especially boring, Dot would hit Berma as many times as she could before the nurse arrived, just so she could count the bruises the next day.

After seeing how nice the ice cream looked when it came out of the refrigerator, Margaret Futch tried an experiment of her own. She froze her favorite cat in the ice-box.

LaVerne West "ain't never done nothing."

When We Grow Up

I was in the top of a tree watching a "cannibal" village in deepest Africa. From my position, fortunately, I could watch the proceedings without being seen. On one side of a clearing was an old barber's chair which served as a throne.

Sitting on the throne in regal splendor, war paint, and feathers was King Billy Turpin, having an enormously good time watching the show. Immediately in front of him was a large pot with a fire under it. Dancing around the pot were several beautiful dancing girls who were very happy about having someone in "hot water." You guessed it—Arthur Nims was peeking over the edge of the pot!

I noticed a crowd in one corner of the clearing listening to Billy Dixon who was perched on a soap-box, still trying to get his governor re-elected. Passing through the crowd selling peanuts, pop-corn, and cracker-jack were Jack McKay and John Hemingway, a result of their lunch room days, no doubt.

In the distance were heard weird noises. Then the natives in the clearing made a pathway through which rode a red and yellow model "T". Our old friends George Head and Jap Hogan stepped out to join the fun. And speaking of fun, in another side of the clearing were a bunch of rug-cutters led by that versatile Billy Fisher. And they weren't dancing to tom-toms, either. Benny Griffith was there with his portable record player.

Suddenly there came a shout from the distance. I ducked behind a big limb and Ebo "Tarzan" West came swinging through the trees. He swooped down on a vine to the middle of the clearing.

E. P. Scott, who was polishing a necklace of bones, and Geno Cassini, who was reading a book entitled How to Speak Pongo-Pongo in 3 Easy Lessons, looked up from their occupations long enough to watch Richard Hanberry sink a 20-foot putt, playing the new Pongo golf. Billy Burns and Calder Clay, finding the proceedings dull, were sleeping under a banana tree.

I was disgusted because I couldn't hear some jokes "Suzy" Smith was telling, and judging by the way Billy Sheftall and Bobby Bateman were laughing, they must have been good!

A model airplane came swooping down on the royal throne with Charlie Milam chasing close behind it. And there was Jimmy Goldwire who was now throwing daggers instead of pocket knives!

Goodloe Grier and Furlow Alexander seemed to have given up barber shop music in favor of a new war chant.

Then the king hit a gong, and the floor show started. Everybody turned to watch. Wallace Richter was hanging by his teeth from a vine, in order to get a good angle shot with his candid camera. Earl Zimmerman was master of ceremonies. A large bone was tied in his fiery hair. I laughed out loud when Bub Massenburg came out with a beautiful native girl to do a skit. Both were dressed in sarongs.

Someone heard me and yelled "Look! a newspaper reporter!" The next thing I knew they were swarming up the tree after me. I lost my footing and fell. Then bump! I woke up—the cannibals didn't get me after all.

Third row: What more could one want—convertible, top down and Cherry Street.

Mercer University

A Century of Tradition

More than 3,000 living alumni in every sphere of the life of the nation constitute striking testimony of the soundness of the ideals of scholarship and citizen-building which have guided Mercer University throughout one hundred years of devotion to liberal Christian education.

Twenty-five graduate generations have contributed to useful social service as jurists, doctors, ministers, journalists, teachers, attorneys and business leaders who have enriched the traditions of the institution as a significant instrument of enlightened public endeavor.

Mercer University makes available to all young men and women of earnest character a program fashioned by competent and conscientious administrators to combine with the best traditions of education those practical qualities which are designed to prepare the young citizen for the problems of today. The program leads to nationally accredited degrees. A carefully studied faculty-student ratio assures against mass instruction.

We'll Never Forget

Crowell practicing to succeed Caruso.

That "just-so" hair of Wylene Dillard's.

Sunshine-Babe flirting with any and every girl.

Sara Wright shaking the rafters with those hearty laughs.

Frank Tinker's pipe.

Claudia Ray's microscopic handwriting.

Lewis Smith's preference for Campbell Soup.

The way Top Collins puts off graduating to the next half-year.

Massenburg haunting the golf course on Sunday nights.

Dot Hall's squeals at the end of laughs.

Ebo spending all his time at the river.

Eleanor Powell's peculiar sneezes.

George's "yellow model-A".

That disarming smile that belongs to Woo (Adams) Huckabee.

Turpin showing off his unsurpassed brilliance.

Agnes Grace exclaiming that everything is "real, real good."

James Berg doing it right with Wright.

Jeannette Freeman's struggle to make an "A" in French.

Oliver Bateman, the wonder man with the women.

The way Vivian Wilson is always humming popular songs.

John Hemingway declaiming.

We'll Never Forget....

Margie Weem's continual query—
"Anybody got a penny?"

the fourth no-break.

Helen Wood manicuring her nails in the classroom.

That good clean fun of "Big Red".
Betsy's red clothes.

Sam Crossley keeping the Military Department spic and span.

Jane West aimlessly wandering around the chemistry lab.

The Cinderella instinct of "Suzy."

Peggy Halliburton fascinating us with her accent.

The conflicting names of Robert and Bobby Wynne.

Geneva's too-loud narrations in study hall on "what I did last night."

"Snake's" role of peeping Tom.

Harriet Ann trilling through the halls.

Ovid Wooten's nickname "Honey."

Irene Levine having to stay in every day.

Emily Andrew's mysterious art of acquiring Houston's pins.

Martha Weaver giving advice to the lovelorn.

Passing Louise Pound for a strong whiff of "Tourjours Moi" perfume.

Mary Stephenson owning two or three closets full of shoes.

Mary Walker's and Jane Marshall's half-hearted attempts at reducing.

Shy little Rose Morgan suddenly becoming the "thorn in Mr. Pulliam's flesh."

Kathleen Hogan's breastplate of club pins.

I shall always remember your sweet smile & visits to me while I was sick.
Sincerely,
Mrs. A. M. Smith
